GIRL CHASES RICH MINER OUT OF HOME

At Point of Pistol, Miss Gibson Demands Immediate Marriage.

Long Beach, Calif., Oct. 12.—Julia Ward Gibson, daughter of a retired Presbyterian minister of Pasadena, was arrested yesterday at the home of A. D. Myers, a Nevada mining millionaire, it is said, after she had chased Myers out of his apartment with a revolver, and forced him to take refuge in the house of a neighbor.

Miss Gibson was taken to the county jail in Los Angeles under $3000 bonds to answer charges of assault with a deadly weapon.

Miss Gibson acquired a prominent place in the news columns recently when she filed a suit against Myers for $100,000 damages for breach of promise. Yesterday she came to Long Beach after having purchased a revolver, which it is claimed she said she intended to use as a persuader in the event Myers proved reluctant to accept her proposition of immediate marriage. She brought her father, W. E. Gibson, along to perform the ceremony without delay.

Entering Myers' home she made her way to his apartment and demanded to know whether he intended to marry her. When he said no, she whipped out the revolver, according to Myers, and declared he had just half a minute to make up his mind.

Myers found a door, and darting through it he hurried down a back stairway and dashed across the grounds surrounding his residence to a neighbor's house. From there he telephoned the police, who found Miss Gibson in full possession of the mansion.

Lanier Of the Cavalry

By General Charles King, U. S. A.

Copyright, 1909, by J. B. Lippincott Company.

Author of "The Colonel's Daughter," "Foes in Ambush," Etc.

Curbit lowered his voice. "That's exactly the trouble, doctor. Go to the back of the quarters and see for yourself. His trail starts and ends here."

In all its history Fort Cushing had never known such a day of bewilderment as that which followed. Guard mounting was held as usual at 8 a. m., and Colonel Burton, awaiting in his office the coming of the old and the new officers of the day, directed his adjutant to drop his own work at their entrance and give attention to what took place.

All eyes were on the two burly captains who entered at 8:30, fur capped, fur gloved, in huge overcoats and arctic. The wind had begun to whine and stir.

"Blizzard coming," said Scott as he glanced at the sullen skies.

"I report as old officer of the day, sir," said Curbit, with brief salute, tendering the guard report book.

The colonel went straight to business.

"No sign of Trooper Rawdon?"

"No, sir."

"His horse and kit all right?"

"All right, sir."

"Police notified to watch all trains and stages?"

"Yes, sir."

There was impressive silence in the office.

Eight men had gone with Sergeant Stowell as escort to the paymaster when, nearly four weeks earlier, he had set forth on his trip. Then the little iron safe was full of money. Seven men had come back with him, when, as the safe was well nigh empty, the paymaster said he hardly needed an escort. Of the eight who started, four were "casuals" who belonged to companies stationed at Fort Frayne, well up in the Indian country, and there they remained when the duty was over. Of the seven who came with Stowell, three belonged to Fort Frayne, a corporal and two men of Captain Raymond's troop, and they came fortified with the orders of their post commander, a copy of which was now in Barker's hands.

"What I don't understand," said the colonel, whirling his chair to the right about and addressing the paymaster, "is how or why those men should be down here."

"It seems simple," answered Scott.

placidity, he being entirely independent of the post commander. "From Frayne I had to go to the cantonments up along the Big Horn, and we doubled the size of the escort accordingly. When we got back there these three were permitted to come all the way, whether to buy Christmas things for the Frayne folk or for affairs of their own I didn't inquire."

"To whom did you assign them for rations and quarters?" demanded the colonel of Barker.

"Captain Snaffle, sir, C troop."

"Are they there—the others, at least?"

"Corporal Watts and Trooper Ames are there, sir. Trooper Rawdon, as you know, is not. He has not been seen about the quarters since some time last evening."

Again a pause. Then presently, "You arrested Kelly, I see, the man who was on No. 5."

"Yes, sir. Both Dr. Schuchardt and the steward said his sickness was due to drink. I believe he was doped."

"That he could get whisky anywhere along back of the officers' quarters," said the colonel reflectively as well as reflecting, "is not improbable. That it should have been doped, judging from the way one or two have misbehaved, is not impossible. The usual orders for the present, captain," said he to the new incumbent, "and you are relieved, Captain Curbit, to the old. 'But I shall need to see you later, so do not leave the post.'"

"The man that leaves the post this day," said Major Scott, with a squint through the upper and unincumbered panes of the nearest window, "may need a seven days' leave."

"And that, colonel," said a quiet voice at the commander's elbow, "is what I applied for earlier. Pardon me, sir, but I need to know your decision."

It was Captain Sumter who spoke, and the colonel flushed promptly at sound of his voice.

"I had intended sending for you, Sumter," said he, "but these rather engrossing matters had to be taken up first. I—have your application," he continued, "it is an awkward time, and these are awkward circumstances. It will leave your troop without an officer."

"Mr. Lanier will be here, colonel."

"Here, but in close arrest," frowned the colonel, "and you haven't had a first lieutenant since I have been in command."

"My misfortune, sir, but hardly my fault," answered Captain Sumter tersely, yet respectfully. "General Sheridan selects his aids-de-camp where he will, and last month you thought it a compliment to the regiment and to my troop. Our guest, Miss Arnold, is in no condition to travel alone," added Captain Sumter gravely. "My wife and I desire to accompany her to Chicago."

The colonel bit his lip and bowed. "I see," said he. "Miss Arnold was very much shaken by what happened after she got home?"
